

ABSTRACT

A menu system comprises a frame that receives interchangeable menu sections with different heights such that sections of various heights are combined to fill the frame space. The menu sections have a central web with upper and lower front channels that 5 receive a presentation strip. Clips, catches, latches, and magnets are used to secure the menu sections in the frame. End caps at each end of the menu sections prevent inadvertent loss of presentation strips from the menu sections.